RACES FOR GOELET CUPS.

THE COLONIA AND THE QUEEN MAB WERE THE WINNERS.

A CROWNING GLORY FOR THE GREAT SCHOONER -CLOSE CONTEST OF THE SLOOPS-FEAT-URES OF A BRILLIANT SPECTACLE. [BT TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

Newport, R. I., Aug. 7.-When Clarence A. Poss ley's big schooner came romping home this afterof the Goelet Cup races, the hundreds of dented witnesses of the contest were unanimous declaring that in all the fifteen years since the valuable gift was offered, there had never n a finer struggle than was here afforded. It was a race to dream about, and to write about, for was history-making in its essential characterstics. It is true that the Colonia won the cup for the second time. She won it as a sloop in 1881, and now in 1896, having risen a peg in the scale, she grosps the more valuable trophy, that for the schooner class. The victory was one which should establish her supremacy as the exceptional boat of the year.

The course sailed was the one of all others to reffect the Colonia's well-earned victory. It was Block Island course, where windward work and reaching power were fully developed. She de tested the Emerald by fourteen minutes and seven She won over her smaller rival, onds. by twelve minutes and thirtysine seconds. In addition to this, the latter and a time allowance of thirteen minutes forty-eight seconds. The Iroquois was three minutes and thirty-seven seconds behind her glistening wake. The Marguerite had thirty-eight minutes and eight seconds of time gainst her, while the Elsemarie was beaten thirtyseven minutes and three seconds.

THE SLOOP RACE.

In the sloop class the Queen Mab won the fivehundred-dollar cup after as gallantly contested a race as has ever been sailed anywhere. The most reasonable thing about it was the apparent ease with which both she and the Wasp held their own with which both she have a schooners at the first with the heavily canvased schooners at the first mark off Block Island, it was for an instant a question whether the Emerald and the Wasp would not have a repetition of the Volunteer d Gracie episode at the same mark in 1891. The Wasp was beaten two minutes and eleven seconds and the Carmita by twenty-six minutes and twenty-nine seconds. This, like the other race, was a surprising test of skill, and every changing phere of its progress was watched with the keenest

One thing to note about the race was the apparent lack of interest on the part of sloop-owners. The proof of it is found in the fact that only three were entered. The Volunteer was on hand and sailed over the course, and there were others. Time was, and not so long ago, that from twenty-five to thirty boats might be seen sailing the same course for the same

REGINNING OF THE RACE.

It was just 11 o'clock when a puff of white smoke broke out from the side of the Sylvin, which was anchored near Brenton Reef Lightship and surrounded by a fleet of steam yachts and sailing The wind was southwest and going it clubtopsail fashion. The tide was flood.

Before the gun was fired the Block Island course had been signalled by the committee. This was thirteen and one-half miles southwest, one-half west, to a stakeboat off Block Island, thence eigh teen miles northeast by east, three-quarters east to a markboat off West Island, and thence west by north, one-half north, to the starting point, six and one-half miles, making a total distance of thirtyreport of the small cannon which thus announced that the fifteenth race for the Goelet cups was about to begin Five minutes later the sloops were started on their windward bath, for the direction of the wind made it a beat, a run and a reach.

The sloops crossed in this order: The We 11:36:48; the Queen Mab, 11:06:35; the Carmita 11:36:27. The schooners followed their signal tt 11:16 o'clock and crossed the line as follows: The Colo ma. 11:16:41; the Emerald, 11:11:45; the Marguerite, 11:13:07; the Iroquois, 11:11:34; the Amorita, 11:12:50 Mr Hain's new schooner, the Quissetta, was an object of general interest as she made her way to the mark, and much was expected of her, although it was noticed that she labored overmuch in the choppy sea that was running. She seemed too lean orward to rise to the sea, and buried her head with every forward plunge. Those who wished her well were destined to disappointment for just as she was approaching the line the jaws of her main gaff fell half-way to the deck, leaving the sail a hopeless mass. The main throat halliard block had parted, and she was withdrawn from the

For the rest, the cup contest was confined to the Colonia, the Emerald and the America, for the Iroquois, the Marguerite and the Elsemarie were engaged in a special race under working topsails, which race was won by the Marguerite.

All the boats crossed the line on the starboard tack, and swept swiftly forward into the open water, preparatory for tacking to get the adof inshore places. The Amorita alone made short work of this preparation, for almost instantly she tacked to port and started for the smoother water. The Colonia was sent about in simliar fashion seven minutes after the start, and was followed in a few moments by her associates, the three sloops were the leaders in this move. Just here may be cited a circumstance that may have contributed to the defeat of the Wasp. Late this evening it was ascertained that before crossing the HAS HOHENLOHE RESIGNED? shipped, they being so constructed that there was line she was fouled by the steam yacht Viking and a hole was torn in her mainsail about fifteen cloths in from the leech. Later, during the inshore work and when well down toward Narragansett, she was compelled to stop to right the difficulty, which threatened serious results, and she was passed by the Queen Mab. This occurred thirty-five minutes after the preparatory gun had been fired.

The order of the boats then was: The Colonia, the Queen Mab, the Wasp, the Emerald, the Amorita, the Carmita, the Marguerite, the Iroquois and the Elsemarie, but the distances, especially between the schooners, were fast widening, and the Colonia was going like a veritable spirit of the air for the Block Island mark. Ten minutes before 12 o'clock she was still working down inshore to escape the tide. The Emerald, whose handling was open to criticism, was standing wide of the Colonia to leeward on the starboard tack, while the Amerita was directly astern of the Postley boat and holding her own so decidedly that wagers were made that she would come in tri-

A little later she was Cestined to make the hearts of those on the Colonia quake with genuine fear, for she held to her tactics until when she was met at last in the open water she was so high up in the course that she saved almost one entire tack on the leader and nearly accomplished the feat of crossing the bow of the Emerald on the final starboard reach for the mark.

ROUNDING THE TWO MARKS.

The Colonia was far away toward the mark, which she rounded at 1:29:30. About two minutes later that gigantic spinnaker broke into a great dark bulging mass over the starboard rail, and all chance of her defeat, barring accident, was over.

chance of her defeat, barring accident, was over. The Emeraid, which had held so close to the wind that her jib-topsail was frequently aback, after baffling the Amorita held on her course until well past the line of the mark, and then, coming about, stood in with every chance of making it in a final short hitch.

She was salling like her old self once more, and as she approached the Amorita, the latter held her course, and the Emeraid was forced about. Once around she footed so fast that when she hitched once more for the mark she crossed Mr. Brokaw's path in fine style, and then came into instant conflict with the Wasp. Both approached the mark, and Mr. Maxwell tried to bluff the little chap, but it would not work. The Wasp held on with a tight grip and rounded first at 1:33:10, followed by the Emeraid at 1:33:37. The Amorita rounded at 1:35:05. These, it must be borne in mind, had been preceded by the Queen Mab at 1:41:25.

mind, had been preceded by the Queen Mab at 1:47:25.

The run to the second mark was simply a discouraging incident for the crews who were watching the gray mass of canvas that was bearing the Colonia along at a pace that would puzzle a torpedo-catcher. The second mark was rounded in this order: The Colonia, 3:34:52; the Emerald, 3:48:52; the Queen Mab, 3:48:45; the Amorita, 3:5:505, and the Wasp, 3:55:40.

The Colonia nearly made a mess of her good work by risking her spinnakerboom on the sweep around the mark. The boom was instantly buried as she careened in the water, until her starboard rail was buried in it, but this was soon remedied, and in the close reach home there were no difficulties for her to evade.

Of course, there was the customery salutation.

At Fifty-third-st, the conductor came along and spoke to Mr. Germaine and his party. He wanted to know why the men did not get up and give the girls seats. He was told that they did not consider it any of his business. The conductor came along a second time, shook his finger in Mr. Pons's face, said that he (the conductor) could obtain seats for the girls if he wanted to, and threatened to remove Mr. Pons from his seat. Mr. Pons says that the conductor then seized him by the throat and proceeded to assault him. Pons being a slightly built man an assault him. On the other hand, the conductor charges that Mr. Germaine struck him on the head with the ane, but there was no evidence of any marks, either on his white cap or his head, that any blow had been struck. At Fiftieth-st, the conductor stopped the car, and Mrs. Pons shouted for the police. Three policemen from the East Fifty-first-st, station responded. The party got off the car and demanded that the conductor be arrested. The conductor, in turn, made charges against Mr. Germaine of assault, and the latter was taken to the station and locked up. Mr. Pons wanted to make a charge against the conductor, but Sergeant Devey told Mr. and Mrs. Pons to go to the York-ville Court this morning, when they could make a compaint against the conductor.

Later on Mr. Germaine was bailed out. Mr. and Mrs. Pons live at No. 560 Lexington-ave. had been struck. At Fiftieth-st, the conductor

OSTEND SURF BATHING.

The splendid surf which tumbles in on the hard and smooth sandy beach at Ostend offers the lovers of surf bathing an opportunity of thoroughly enjoying that most delightful of pastimes to their hearts' tent. # IMPROVING THE WORLD.

From The Detroit Free Press. "This is a hard world," remarked the man who wails; "a mighty hard world." 'Don't you like it that way?" inquired the acquaintance who can be disagreeable if he tries. "That's a very irrelevant, not to say nonsensical question."

"That's a very irrelevant, not to say nonsensical question."
No, it isn't. I'm just consulting you as to your tastes, because if you don't like the world that way, I think I can hold out some encouragement." I suppose you are one of these people who think they know just what mankind needs, and who belive that if they had their own way the miliennium would start in day after to-morrow."
No, I'm not depending on any, social reforms. I'm putting my trust in the weather. I'll admit that the world's pretty hard just now. But if this hot wave hours out much longer it'll melt, and then it'll probably get soft enough to suit any-body whose tastes happen to run that way."

The Leipsic "Neuste Nachrichten" says that Chancellor von Hohenlohe will offer to resign and that if his resignation should be accepted either Count von Hatzfeldt, the present German Ambassador to Great Britain, or Baron Marschall von Bieberstein, Minister of Foreign Affairs will be appointed to succeed him. In official circles it is denied that there is any truth in the reports as to the motives governing the Emperor in his abandonment of his trip. It is also denied in the same quarter that the Chancellor is to retire.

If Chancellor von Hohenlohe should resign, the home and foreign policy of the German Empire would not be much affected by that resignation Since the retirement of Bismarck there was no onger in German an "iron," not even a tin or straw Chancellor. Von Caprivi, his successor, was nothing but the humble servant of William II the young Emperor who declared haughtly that "there was but one master in the kingdom," and that was himself, who 'did not suffer any other.' To these declarations he added the quotation of the famous axiom of absolutism, "Suprema lex regis voluntas" (The King's will is the supreme law). Caprivi was tired at last of that abject submission of the Chancellor, and he resigned. His successor, Prince von Hohenlohe, seems to have successor, Prince von Honemon, arrived at a similar conclusion. He was expecte to be plant, as he had served in the Court an Cabinet of Bavaria, his native country, which was considered as most monarchical and partisan is ancient ideas of the Middle Ages concerning the submission to the Government. But considered as most monateman an particular its ancient ideas of the Middle Ages concerning absolute submission to the Government. But I seems that Prince von Hohenlohe is tired at las of wearing the collar of Prussianism, and thus be traying his own country. Bavaria, which is in favor of German unity and hegemony, but which does not want that hegemony to become too Prussianized. The latest and most important action of Chancellor von Hohenlohe was his dissatisfaction at the bill presented to the Reichstag about the military penal code of the Empire. When he was at the head of the Bavarian Government he in troduced in the Munich Parliament a bill requiring the publicity of debates in courts-martial. When General Brousart von Schellendorf, the Imperia Minister of War, supported by Emperor William asked the Reichstag to vote the enforcementhroughout the Empire of the secret military penal code of Prussia, Chancellor von Hohenlohe coulent openly oppose the bill, but since then he ha felt that the time had come for him to resign his office.

WITH HIS SKULL SHATTERED

FRANKLIN SEAMAN, OF BROOKLYN, FOUND DEAD IN HIS ROOM.

DEATH BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN ACCIDENTAL A WINCHESTER RIFLE BALL HAD CRASHED

THROUGH HIS HEAD. Franklin Seaman, twenty-six years old, the eldest son of S. H. Seaman, of No. 156 Columbia

Heights, Brooklyn, was found dead in his room last night about 8 o'clock. The particulars, as far as could be learned, are as follows: Young Seaman came home about 7 o'clock, and was heard to go upstairs to his room on the fourth floor by the servants. Not long after that his brother Joseph came in and inquired if Frank had arrived home. The servant maid, Susan McMulkin, said that he had, and that she had heard him go upstairs to his room. Joseph then went to his room, and afterward came down for dinner. After he had been seated in the dining-room for some time and his brother did not appear, he sent the maid Susan up to his room to find out why he did not come down. She went upstairs and found young Seaman on the floor dead, with the top of his head blown

Near the body was a 44-calibre Winchester epeating rifle. A bullet from this rifle had entered the young man's head, directly between the eyes.

Captain Reilly, of the First Precinct, who saw the body, said that the wounds made would almost indicate that it was done by an explosive bullet.

Young Seaman was a member of the Crescent Athletic Club and the 22d Regiment. He was in good health, as far as known. He and his brother Joseph were the only members of the family at home at the time of the shooting. The rest of the family are travelling in different parts of the country, and their exact location could not be learned. Neither Joseph Seaman nor the servants in the house would give any information to reporters last night. Dr. Dickenson, of No. 145 Clinton-st., a former ambulance surgeon, was summoned to the house. He remained for a short time, and when he came out declined to say anything. The dead man was an enthusiastic hunter and had several guns and trophies of the chase in his room. Many of the trophies he obtained while on a hunting expedition in Florida last winter.

It is not known how the shooting occurred, but it is supposed that the young man was either cleaning or fixing the rifle and that it was accidentally discharged. A cartridge which fitted the rifle was found on a desk in the room, which led to the supposition that after Mr. Seaman had removed it from the rifle he thought that no more remained in the firearm and that he was handling the latter carelessly when it went off.

Mr. Seaman was in the Crescent Athletic clubhouse on Thursday evening and chatted with friends as usual. There was nothing to indicate that he had anything on his mind.

The Seaman family is wealthy, and S. H. Seaman, the head of the house, was formerly in the shipping business in this city. He retired from business some time ago. The young man who is now dead had also been in business and had also retired Joseph Seaman, the brother, is two years younger than Franklin, the dead man.

GEORGE J. PENFIELD.

George J. Penfield, a prominent and highly esteemed resident of Wakefield, New-York City, died at his home on Thursday afternoon from apoplexy. Mr. Penfield was born at Camden, Oneida County, this State, on March 34, 1826. He was the younger son of Fowler Penfield, of English descent and honored for his services in the War of 1812. On his maternal side Mr. Penfield was of Holland descent, of the families of Demilt and Wormsley, early Huguenot settlers of this country.

For many years Mr. Penfield was a resident of New-Rochelle, where he was active in public affairs, having served several terms as a village affairs, having served several terms as a village trustee and member of the Board of Education, was twice elected Supervisor of the town and member of Assembly from the Hd District. He refused nominations to Congress and to the Senate.

Mr. Penfield began life as a farmer, but shortly after reaching his majority he engaged in the lumber and coal business, from which he retired in 1862 to accept the management of the Westchester Fire Insurance Company, of which he was the president until 1879. Of late years his private business had occupied all his time. He was one of the prime movers in the incorporation and development of the former village of Wakefield, and was an active member of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He leaves a wife, one daughter and three an active member of the Methodist Episcopa Church. He leaves a wife, one daughter and three

TWO BOY THIEVES CONFESS.

THEY REVEAL TO CAPTAIN CHEEVER A REMARKABLE SERIES OF ROBBERIES.

BOTH BELONG TO A GANG CALLING THEMSELVES THE "AMERICAN CROOK ASSOCIATION," WHICH HAD LONG BAFFLED

THE POLICE.

John Gavlet, sixteen years old, of No. 3,046 Third-ave., and Walter Cassidy, fifteen years old, of No. 252 Mott-ave, who were pursued on Thursday night and caught after a long chase by a crowd, because Gaviet had shot Michael J. Sheridan, of No. 292 Willis-ave., have confessed to the police of the Morrisania station that they, with a number of other boys, were the burglars in nearly half a score of housebreakings that have been reported lately. Young Gaviet is under $1,000 ball already to answer for two burgiaries. He confessed to the robbery of $50 in cash and stamps from Christian Werner's drugstore, at No. 708 Courtlandt-ave. on July 9. There he and his pals killed a Scotch terrier dog because it made a noise. He also confessed that he had robbed the hardware store of Slefert & Hoffman, at No. 3,135 Third-ave., of $90 worth of cutlery and hardware on July 16. Here they took fifty picklocks used by the locksmith of the establishment. Gaviet's brotherin-law, John L. Ball, with whom he had been living, furnished the $1,000 hail when he was held on these charges. On July 25 the house of W. P. Curtis, at No. 521 East One-hundred-and-sixty-first-st., was entered early in the morning. A pair of boxing gloves and tableware to the value of $25 were stolen. But the feature of the robbery was the communication left behind by the burglars. They first smeared the walls of the dining-room with eggs, which had been placed at night in the refrigerator, and then pasted upon it a large piece of paper. Upon the paper was written in a big hand: "This is the

On July 21, while the country, his house, at the country of the co ave., was broken into and $200 worth of silver and plated-ware was taken away. The burglary appeared to be the work of amateurs, because some valuable pieces of solid silver were rejected by the burglars in favor of some bulky plated pieces. The burglars wrote with a blue lead pencil upon the wall paper a message almost identical with that left at the Curtis house. Then the burglars took a rest of four days. But they made up for lost time during the following four days. A burglary a night was their record for this period. On July 31 the hardware store of Leo Vath at No. 294 Third-ave, was broken into. Four revolvers of the Iver-Johnson make were stolen, with some other wares. Michael Bush, hardware dealer, at No. 3,000 Third-ave., lost $130 worth of goods the next night. Then followed the robbing of Frederick Spranger, a cigar dealer at One-hundred-and-thirty-eighthst., near Mott-ave. He lost about $25 worth of cigars and tobacco. On the fourth night burglars got into the fancy goods store of Adolf Blumfeldt in Third-ave., near One-hundred-and-forty-fifth-st., The bold obbers were not looking for bargains in hairpins or curling irons. As far as could be learned, they took only four dolls and these had their china brains dashed out in the hallway and were thrown down there.

All these burgiaries were reported to the police, and the four detectives of the precinct-McCafferty, Schermer, Armstrong and Kiernanworked hard upon them. They could not, however, get a clew to the burglars. It was only when the two boys, after playing at desperadoes, had shot a man and been captured with three revolvers upon them, that a clew was found. The three revolvers were of the four stolen from Detective McCafferty took the revolver to Detective McCanerty took the revisers Gaviet, showed him the evidence against him and advised him to confess, saying that it was the only thing that would help him, but the boy refused to talk. When Captain Creeden talked to him, however, he broke down, and confessed to all the foregoing robberies.

The strangest part of the case is that nothing of the plunder except one revolver had ever

The strangest part of the case is that nothing of the plunder except one revolver had ever been pawned. A part of it, Gaviet said, was hid in a three-cornered vacant lot enclosed by Fifteenth-st. Bergen and Brooke aves. The police found a large part of the stolen cutiery in a hollow place made after removing one of the stones in a wall. The stone had been replaced so that no one who was ignorant of the hiding place would ever suspect it. All of the stolen property except the cash was recovered. The boys say they have spent that.

Gaviet told the names of some of his pals, and the police started out last night to find them.

the police started out last night to find them. They doubted the correctness of the names. Walter Cassidy is a respectable-looking boy who lives with his mother and father, and several brothers and sisters, at No. 252 Mott-ave. His father, Thomas Cassidy, was formerly en-gineer at the Protectory.

WATSON'S FIREWORKS.

From The New-York World. Like so many other fervent young men who are sending up rockets and setting off Roman candles and pinwheels in this campaign, Mr. Watson has an assortment of fireworks that are dezgling and full of go. The spectators are never disappointed.

HE NOW KNOWS "WHERE HE IS AT." From The Buffalo Courter.

Whatever may be said in criticism of Watson, but candor is refreshing. He knows that the Chicago Convention nominated Mr. Bryan with the view of obtaining the indorsement of the National Pepulist Convention. He knows that the Chicago Convention made a piatform with the view of obtaining Populist votes at the polis. He was that the attempt of Chairman Jones to form the Populist ticket is with the view of obtaining the Populist ticket is with the view of disinfrom the Populist ticket is with the view of disinferent party has been making things unpleasant for allver Democrats in local and State politics in the

FOR A SEPARATE TICKET.

From The Chicago Record. From The Chicago Record.

Thomas E. Watson, Populist nominee for Vice-President, is not afflicted with any of the reticence in expression regarding his views or position for which some of the candidates in the field of National politics this year are criticised. Mr. Watson believes Mr. Sewall should withdraw and make room on the ticket for a Populist nominee, and he does not hesitate to give expression to that belief. He also believes Mr. Bryan should accept the Populist nomination for the Presidency outright, and he says so. Failing in that, he would have a reparate Populist ticket by having another candidate named in place of Mr. Bryan.

BRYAN MUST ACT.

From The Utica Press. From The Utica Press.

Surely Mr. Bryan must do something with the Populists' proffer of nomination. He must either accept or refuse it. If he accepts the nomination, he must also accept their platform, and if he does that, it will matter very little to what extent the Chicago resolutions are patched up to suit existing emergencies and exigencies. All concerned seem to have made a pretty mess of it.

JONES'S SERIOUS OFFENCE.

From The Philadelphia Times. Since the action of the St. Louis Convention splitting the Chicago ticket in two, Chairman Jones has been very much worried, and has been persistently "talking through his hat." He has not only talked too much, but he committed the uppardonable offence in a politician, usually attributed to children and fools—that is, telling the truth.
